A: TL866cs' firmware is compatible with tl866-a. However, TL866cs will be replaced by TL866a soon (advice from manufacturer) TL866cs' current firmwares (4.0 to 4.1) are for TL866-CS, which has a different display from TL866-A. This still won't help you if you don't have a TL866-A. Structural and functional analysis of the insulin receptor intracellular domain. A recombinant fusion protein comprising the cytoplasmic domain of the insulin receptor linked to the human growth hormone polypeptide has been expressed in mammalian cells. The cDNA encoding the hybrid receptor was transfected into the 293 fibroblast cell line; the plasma membrane-localized fusion protein was characterized by immunoprecipitation and immunoblotting analysis. The full-length fusion receptor localized to the plasma membrane and was phosphorylated on tyrosine residues. The hybrid receptor bound insulin-like growth factor I (IGF-I) and IGF-II with high affinity ($K_d = 38 \text{ nM}$) and specificity and processed the IGF ligands by cleavage of the disulfide bond connecting the growth hormone moiety to the juxtamembrane domain of the fusion receptor. Fusion receptor tyrosine phosphorylation was dose-dependent, was inhibited by insulin and IGF-I, and was not stimulated by epidermal growth factor. Phospholipase C activation was elicited by insulin and was also inhibited by insulin. These studies demonstrate the potential use of the fusion protein system to gain insights into mechanisms underlying signal transduction and to address questions regarding the structure and function of the insulin receptor cytoplasmic domain. Mama's tears 'Mama, I'm scared...' This little whisper of fear is a bit of a challenge to me to witness from time to time. It's not that I am a glass-half-full kind of person; I'm more of
