A Photoshop plugin, or _plug-in_, that adds special features. So what do _Photoshop_ and _photography_ have to do with one another? When we take photographs, we take them as a record of life for a certain period of time. Images are basically digital snapshots. What we do with those snapshots, however, changes the original image in a way that we can actually control. When we take a photograph, we make a `_print_` of the image. The print then becomes the physical example of the image. We call this `_printing_`. Prints are one of the most important aspects of taking a photograph. They can represent the image in different sizes, and the larger the size, the more impact the image will have. It is common to print two or three `_copies_` of the image — usually on matte rather than glossy paper. This limits the amount of times you can display the image, which is why there are not a million prints of the Eiffel Tower! That is the way the process goes in the printing industry. Prints go from a lab to an office or retail store to homes. The process is basically the same whether it's a high-end photography catalog from a large manufacturer, a calendar from a small company, or a postcard from a local store. Postcards represent a different side of printing — one that is becoming more popular with the technological advances of digital cameras and printing. They are cheap to make, and they travel well. Postcards can be really simple. But they can also be elaborate and take advantage of the more advanced aspects of printing. Think of the beautiful images you can create with specialized equipment for professional photography. What is the most important aspect of a print of an image, whether it's a holiday card or a business letterhead? What does it represent about that image? It represents an image on a page — a page filled with words and pictures that we can look at when we're using that image. What is it telling us? What is it saying? It's telling us that we have an image, and it has an identity. It's telling us that the image is an important thing and that it should be treated with the utmost respect. It's telling us that it's one of many images on that page, but it's special, and that special part of it should be the focus of the reader's attention. Like most

A combined gene therapy and stem cell treatment has shown promise in activating stem cells in the brains of mice with

Huntington's disease. The research – using transplanted stem cells together with a gene therapy technique – is reported in the journal Cell Stem Cell, in the article “Gene therapy and neural stem cell transplantation for Huntington's disease.” Huntington's disease (HD) is a genetic disorder that causes problems with movement and learning. At present, there is no treatment available for HD. Adult stem cells are capable of dividing and differentiating into different types of cell in a number of different tissues. Stem cells can be treated with gene therapy to activate their own production of disease-fighting proteins and can then be transplanted back into the affected area of the brain. In this new study, researchers developed a technique to direct the specific activation of stem cells by inhibiting a protein that normally stops them from producing the disease-fighting proteins. This is known as ‘translational control.’ The group transplanted stem cells together

What's New In?

The present invention relates to a container for a high molecular weight powder, in particular for grinding coffee, and also to a process for emptying such a container. High molecular weight powder such as, for example, coffee powder, consists of fine particles having a particle size between 0.1 and 2.5 mm. It normally takes at least a few days

for the powder to be consumed by a person using the powder. The composition and particle size of the powder and, particularly, the content of the powder in the container, are considered by many users to be important for the taste of the coffee. One of the problems with the coffee powder is the difficulty in emptying the container. It is an object of the present invention to provide a container for a high molecular weight powder, which container has a simple and compact design and which is easy to empty. In accordance with the invention, a container for a high molecular weight powder is arranged to contain the powder and has a closure which is movable along an axis and which can be moved by a user by hand. The container is arranged to have an opening through which a mouth of the container can be placed under vacuum. A suction line leads through the opening to a vacuum source. When the closure is located near the opening, the vacuum sucks

air through the container and thus removes the powder from the container. When the closure is moved away from the opening, the container has a negative pressure, and air is sucked through the container. Thus, the powder is removed from the container and the closure is moved along the axis from a closed position in which the closure closes the opening to an opened position in which the closure is spaced from the opening. A container according to the invention can be adapted to have a cap which, for opening the container, can be moved along a central longitudinal axis through a lower part of the container. In a preferred embodiment, the cap is rigidly connected to the lower part of the container and can be lowered with an axial movement of the cap. In this case, the cap can be moved from a closed position in which the cap covers the opening to an opened position in which the cap is spaced from the opening. When the cap is in the opened position, the container has an open upper part. The cap is arranged to be grasped by a user and to be moved along the longitudinal axis between the opened position and the closed position. In one aspect of the invention, the mouth of the container is in the form of a slidable door.
