Query Help for Active Directory Composite Fields I am writing a management GUI for AD based on the Composite Name descriptor. My username is @company.com. I've created my form with 2 combo boxes: one combobox with @company.com one combobox with @company.com.local. I've enabled the LDAP attribute userPrincipalName (which is at @company.com.local, in the AD computer) so that the results in the 2nd combobox contain all the computer accounts under that domain. In company.com @company.com @company.com.local. Finally, I want to be able to enable a button which will query the AD server for the nearest account according to the selected domain. So the selection for the first combobox will then be: @company.com @company.com.local. I would like my query to then return the first one in the list. I have found this link: This is what I have so far: $groups = "domain" + $ComboBox1.SelectedItem + "/" + $ComboBox2.SelectedItem users = get-ntobject -class win2k_user -filter "givenName=$($ComboBox1.SelectedItem)" -rdn:$($groups) (this is my real problem: I don't know how to amend this to return the correct value in terms of distance. I can update the @company.com.local combobox selection to the $groups variable but that then returns all the local users for all the domains. A

The class looks like:

[DataContract(Name = "Configuration")] public class Configuration : ISerializable { //... } This class is serialized/deserialized with a BinaryFormatter. During serialization, the Name property of the class is stored as a string in the serialization stream. My question is, how do I have this serialization behavior during deserialization? I would like to have the deserialization to be able to look up the PropertyInfo's using the Name property... I have a class Test which looks like: public class Test { public string Name { get; set; } } This class is serialized like: var test = new Test() { Name = "Name" }; MySerializer.Serialize(stream, test); Then, I would like to deserialize it like this:
var test2 = MySerializer.Deserialize(); var name = test2.Name; What is the best way of implementing this? I can hack this together using: var name = test2.GetType().GetProperty("Name").GetValue(test2, null); But I am wondering if there is some better way of doing this. A: Have your serialized class contain a private serializedName field that is set in the constructor. Something like this: [DataContract(Name = "Configuration")] public class Configuration : ISerializable { private string m_serializedName = string.Empty; public Configuration(string name) { m_serializedName = name; } private Configuration() { //... } Now serialization (both serializing and deserializing) has some integrity, because Name is not simply a string but rather a serializedName. You don't need to worry about deserialization because 648931e174

... A: I think i managed to work it out, the problem was Windows 10, despite it being 64-bit it was not activated - this causes an error, which cannot be fixed by pressing F8. Downloading the tools and crack files I used this tool I also removed the activation key from the installation EXE // Package mltoken provides some utility functions that are about making // Go source compatible with elasticsearch's jsonml parser. // // TODO: Consider making this go-compatible entirely with the zip-layout // the elasticsearch team is working on for releases in the future. // package mltoken import ("reflect" "strings" "unicode/utf8") const c_maxTokenAllowed = 255 var utf8RuneCount = strings.Count(string(utf8.RuneError), '\uFFFF') func maxErr(err error) error { if err == nil { return nil } msg := errorsMapping[err] if msg != "" { return errorsMapping[msg] } return errorsMapping["%v: %v"] } // UnmarshalText unmarshals a blob of text encoded by utf8Runes. func UnmarshalText(blob []byte, wantToken bool) ([]byte, error) { if blob == nil || len(blob) == 0 { return nil, nil } if len(blob)
