In iBOT, the discrete event simulation program runs in parallel on an agent, taking care of everything automating the scheduling of the simulation step. To reduce the agent's workload, the software combines discrete event simulation and task scheduling in the same agent. iBOT supports not only discrete event simulation, but also task management, and simulation management. This makes iBOT a robust and effective solution for discrete event simulation. Users can choose from Java, Python, R, C/C++, C# and Visual Basic programming languages for constructing a custom agent in iBOT. iBOT supports extensive Java libraries to facilitate the integration of external applications and systems. It includes libraries for data access, integrated messaging, web services, Java Server Faces (JSF), OpenFlow, and more. The Task Manager API is also a part of iBOT; it allows agents to perform complex tasks in a manual or automated way. iBOT supports scientific Java, Python, and R programming. In addition to its flexibility, iBOT is very easy to use: the agent can be created and simulated very quickly. iBOT includes visualization tools and interface libraries. With iBOT, a user can simulate the operation of thousands of agents simultaneously, and can create different scenarios by setting parameters. For more information, click here.
